Ramsey Lecture & Honors Forum Induction

March 6, 2018

This year was the 20th annual Ramsey Lecture, which combined with the Honors Forum induction in order to showcase the kind of research that Honors Forum members have access to. Thirteen sophomores and 51 freshmen were in attendance.

English department graduate students presented a paper which uncritical acceptance of generalizations, "Medieval women were oppressed, robbed of their voices, and their understanding of what we really know about the world is obliterated not just by the loss of their voices, but by the loss of their all locks." Following the talk, there was a dinner for the new inductees.
