

Abstract: Cardiac dimensions have been shown to differ between the sexes in response to physical activity, specifically in left ventricular internal diameter, wall thickness, and mass (6, 9, 21, 22)